Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: . reinforced concrete is presented in the construction of penstocks for the conveying of water, frequently under considerable head. A recent investigation conducted by Mr. Leonard C. Wason, President of the Aberthaw Construction Co. of Boston, throws an interesting light upon the subject. He was particularly anxious to learn whether expansion joints would be necessary with this form of construction. Literature upon concrete construction was carefully scanned as regards authoritative statements. A typical competent authority for the theory stated that reinforced concrete can be built of indefinite length if properly reinforced, and be free from shrinkage, owing to temperature and settling stresses. Not content, however, with such a general statement, Mr. Wason sought the personal opinions and experiences of various engineers. Their replies are interesting as they are varied. An engineer experienced in concrete and hydraulic work showed a drawing of penstock of curved section with...
